It is worth while to take a little pains and find the shoe that just suits you. Having found a shoe which feels comfortable upon the foot, which wears well and which has a smart appearance, then remember the name and trade-mark of that shoe so that you can always duplicate it.

The McElwain trade-mark is put upon each pair of McElwain Shoes so that, once having found the shoe that suits you, you can always secure that shoe again.

IT'S A HARD LIFE

Thomas Lands His First Summer Job, With Disastrous Results.
By WEX JONES.

MY NAME is Thomas Twitmore. I am 21 years old and very ambitious.

That is why during the summer, while I am not in Yardsville, acquiring knowledge, I am always hunting up jobs with the object of acquiring money. Sometimes I think, as we are taught in college, that knowledge is better than money, but not very often.

Knowledge will often enable you to cut out your friend with some peach, but nothing will buy her ice cream soda except money.

However, as I was saying, every summer I hunt up a job that will bring me in a few plunks, as I have made up my mind to become a millionaire. People say it's easy after you get the first thousand dollars, but it seems to me that with a thousand dollars you have more chances to lose your money. If you have only $2 you're not asked to invest it in ice farms in Greenland or prickly pear farms in Honduras.

When you stake your only thousand dollars and lose it, you're just as broke as if you bet your last dollar and lost it.

But I must tell you about my first job.

I got one as waiter in a summer hotel. The reason I selected this job was because waiting seemed so easy and I had read waiters made as high as $50 a day in tips. Also when I got the job the boss told me I could wear my waiter's clothes—which the boss provided—in the evenings if I wanted to go to a dance.

The first evening I put on the new evening clothes provided for me and went down to the dining room.

I had three tables to look after, with about four persons at each table. At high school I had been noted for my memory. I could recite "Horatius at the Bridge" without stumbling once. So I had no fear about remembering the orders.

"Corned beef and cabbage and a glass of buttermilk."

"Let her go twice."

"Clam chowder, stewed rhubarb and vanilla ice cream."

"Huckleberry pie and fried eggs and a cup of coffee."

"Crullers for two and a single order of shad roe."

I kept repeating all these orders over and over to myself on my way back to the kitchen. I gave the order, and the chef, with a wild cry, rushed to the boss, yelling, "Watch him; he's crazy; has he a knife?"

"He (pointing to me) rushed up to me and yelled through the door."

"Corned beef and cabbage on the ice-cream chowder—let'er-go—stewed pie and rhubarb cream—fried pie and huckleberry eggs—disorder of single shad roe and a couch of capers."

"Take off my clothes," said the boss.

Claim of Mrs. Jennie Martha Preston Settled by Mexico—Husband Killed in the Juarez Battle.

City of Mexico, Mex., June 14.—The claim of Mrs. Jennie Martha Preston for $8000 pesos ($4000 gold) indemnity for the death of her husband at El Paso during the Mexican revolution was paid today by the Mexican government.

Minister Pedro Lascurain, of the department of foreign relations, said tonight that this case was in no way an exception to the procedure which would be observed in other cases.

He said that this case was only one which was easy of proof and which had been early on the long list in the hands of the department in charge of claims.

On "The Practical Side of a Wedding."

Two Examples of June Brides and What Happened.

GIRLS' thoughts turn naturally to weddings in June as a young man's to love in March and April, but less lightly.

A wedding is not a matter to be lightly undertaken. Leaving sentiment out of consideration, it has an extremely practical side, a hard working side, that appalls many a prospective bride. The more thoughtful she is the more likely she is to be appalled. All that faculty of "management" which will make her notable as a housekeeper is taxed by the event. Even though her mother possesses the faculty in high degree and is willing to work her fingers to the bone and her brain to gray tatters, the bride is the captain of the wedding ship. Everybody obeys her orders, and whether the white ribbed craft sail into the port of success or be shipwrecked on the shoals of a mass of details that go wrong depends upon her captaincy.

June Bride Sent to Rest.

One June bride was sent by her family to a hotel to spend the day before her wedding, so that she might not be worried by the countless last day happenings. Immured with her maid and maniacs, her ears were spared the jangle of the door bell and telephone, her eyes, reading numbers last words from anxious friends, or puzzled tradesmen, her nerves innumerable fears that "something will happen," that the dreaded hitch feared by all careful campaigners might occur.

This was success for the bride, welcome success, no doubt, but wasn't it a little something to do? Won't she be the sort of a wife who will have a headache when her husband asks if he may bring a friend home to dinner? Maybe she had an ancestor who enlisted for the war but fainted on the firing line.

At any rate, young June has already furnished a bride who is in strong contrast to this picture. Dining with a friend a month before the wedding, she answered the friend's remark, "I suppose you'll be half dead the day of the wedding, because you'll be tired out, like other brides."

How June Bride Planned Her Time.

"Not I," answered the sturdy young woman, squaring her shoulders as she had when she played bucket ball at college. "I'm all through."

"What?"

"Yes; trousseau finished, wedding list of guests made out and envelopes addressed. We've decided about the music and we've settled about the refreshments. The next two weeks I'll be busy with the bridesmaids and the unexpected. My bridesmaids will visit me for a week before the wedding, and I intend to rest from my shopping and planning and have that week free for them and to enjoy myself."

The plan worked admirably. The bride appeared not 15 years older, as the brides who work like galley slaves until the last moment and arrive late at the church do, but looked her lovely best, as a bride should, and she walked up the church aisle in perfect time to the music, instead of two steps ahead of it, as she would have done had she been worried about whether the ice cream would melt before the guests were all served.

At the reception at the house all was as serene as the steady ticking of the old-fashioned clock in the hall. There was not even any hurried changing of the arriving guests for their wedding gifts, for each day as the gifts arrived the bride had written them for them. Neither, by the way, were they on exhibition. The star of this event had ordered them all packed and sent away for storage until needed.

They were all lovely and I am delighted, but I don't want any of my friends to be made sensitive by comparison of their gifts. My heart was full of gratitude to every one and I determined that a solid silver vegetable set should not outshine a hand mirror.

Rose Leaves Instead of Rice.

Even to the impatient partying volleys had this bride planned her day of days. There was no rice to be laboriously swept from the carpets nor shaken from the hair nor pried from the eyes and ears. Instead of the cereal she had provided rose leaves cut from pink and white tissue paper and placed in boxes. Into these boxes of American confetti the more exuberant guests thrust their hands, and with the floating paper pelted the freshly wedded pair. From the window of the departing carriage the bride tossed away one pink petal that rested on the bridegroom's shoulder and laughed.

A bride who has so well ordered her wedding may laugh.

FLUME EXCAVATION WORK IS FINISHED

Sand Cement Plant to Be Erected at Elephant Butte Soon.

Elephant Butte, N. M., June 14.—Work at the excavation in the flume is about finished. A channeller has been installed in the excavation and is now in operation, cutting channels into the rocks at the bottom to prevent seepage and make a better anchorage for the concrete.

A concrete mixer is being installed and in a few days the work of filling in the concrete will begin.

It is estimated that it will require 25,000 yards of concrete to fill in the excavation now made, and will require about two months' time, and that the flume will be finished so the water of the river can be diverted into the flume by Sept. 1.

General superintendent James Fauntleroy speaks very confidently of the character of the foundation or bed rock upon which the concrete will rest.

A sand cement plant having a capacity of 1,000 barrels per day will be constructed in the near future. Work for the construction will be opened on June 26.

THREE MEXICAN BOYS ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Escaped From Five Jails Before Adventure of Same Kind in Tucson.

Tucson, Ariz., June 14.—The three Mexican boy bandits, Sandoval, Rosas and Castello, who were in jail at this place awaiting trial, broke from the prison Tuesday night and are nowhere to be found. They have a record unparalleled in the line of jail breaking for ones of their ages, the oldest one of the trio being less than 14 years old. It is said that they broke out of three jails in Sonora, Mexico, and two in southern Arizona, at which places they are wanted. They secured an iron rod from the bed here and pried the bars apart, replacing the bar and dropping eight feet to the ground, without attracting the guard or awakening the other prisoners in the jail.
